Biography

A lifelong involvement in dance leads Fiona to use the moving body in her work, combining the use of 'black screen' or silhouette, combined with digital technology for post-production manipulation.

Fiona has video production, post-production and performance skills that she uses in the making of her work.

In the last few years Fiona has been co-directing Finding Your Compass, with Rosaria Gracia, on funded projects with GP referred mental health participants. They use dance and drawing as recovery tools, leading to the artistic output of a film, for artistic and educational use, exhibited alongside drawings. She is also making her own work in Italy and the UK. See more at www.findingyourcompass.co.uk

As well as the projection of her work at film festivals, she produces site-specific pieces for galleries, clubs and projection onto architecture. She delivers occasional lectures and workshops at universities, sixth-form college and conferences.

Fiona was awarded a distinction for her 'MA Art and Design by Independent Project' at University of Brighton in September 2009. She also has a BA in Performance Art (Contemporary Dance) and continues to enjoy studying and seeing dance.

Fiona has worked as a Picture Editor and Network Presentation Director at Channel 4 and is now, freelance, making occasional title sequences and graphics and for BBC and Channel 4.
